

Transit Lanes

Welcome to this Perfect Driver course. Throughout this course, we are going to look at the law, skills, techniques, and ideas to help you become a better, and safer driver.

In this lesson, we'll look at Transit Lanes.

Transit Lanes

Let's take a closer look at
Transit Lanes and related road signs and lines.

Transit Lanes

Transit Lanes

Transit Lanes are designed to smooth traffic flow, by encouraging drivers to have more people in their car. Transit Lanes, when in operation, are only available to those drivers who have 2 or more, or 3 or more, people in the car - including the driver.

This means that certain lanes are not open to drivers who are by themselves, or at times even with one passenger.

Let's have a look at this more closely.

Transit Lanes

For this example, let us assume we are on a three lane highway, where all lanes are facing the same direction. There is no oncoming traffic in this example.

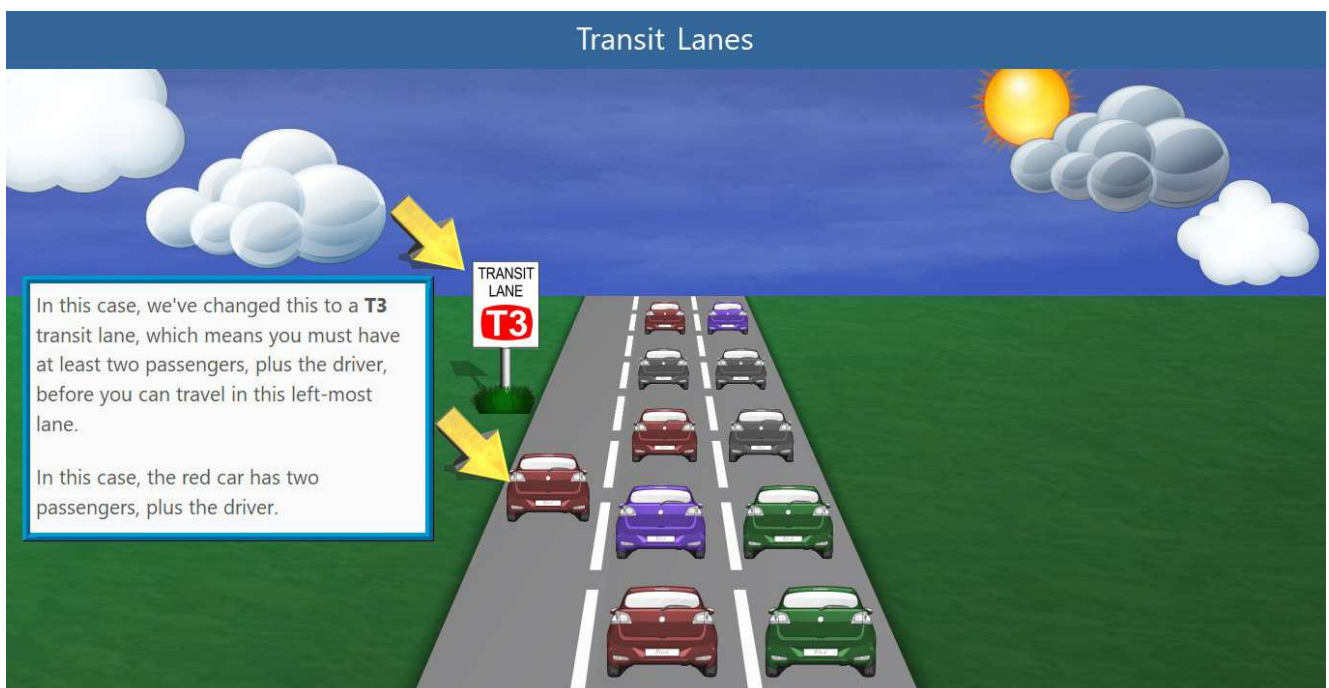

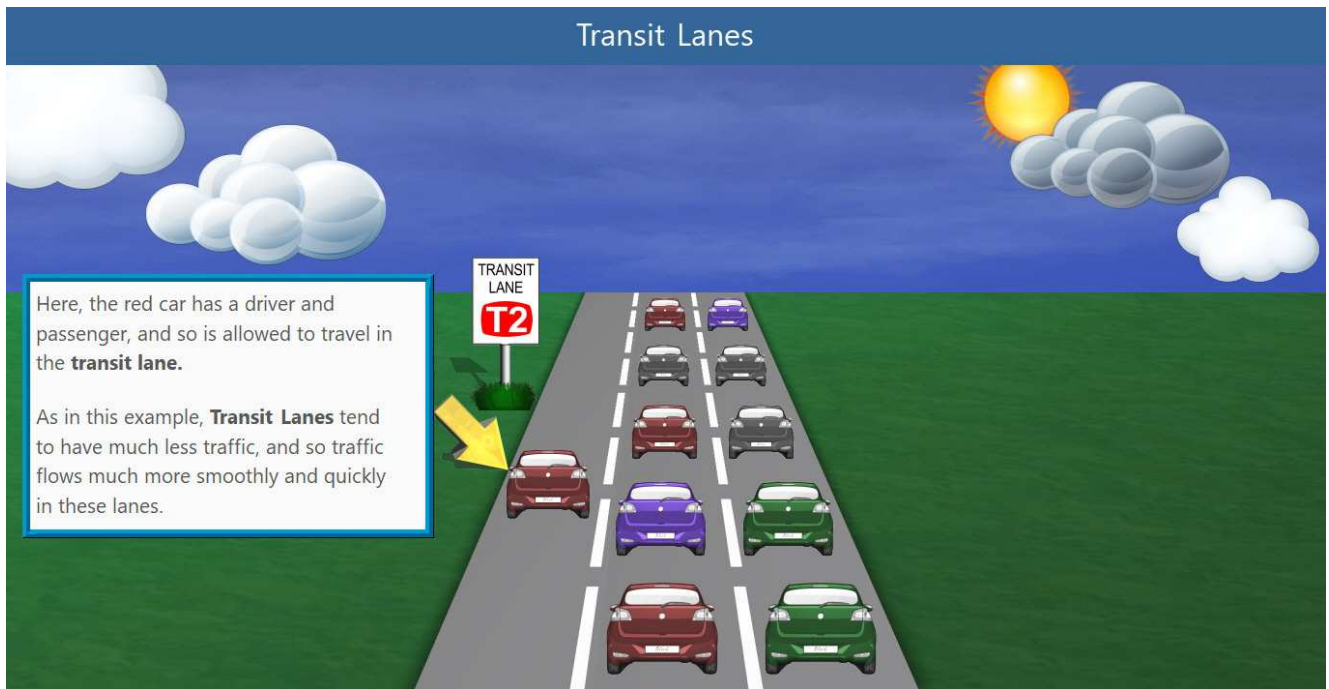

In this example, we have a lot of traffic. The exact time when Transit Lanes are likely to be in force, and are likely to provide a large reduction in travel times.

Transit Lane Summary

Where a Transit Lane is in force, you can only travel in that lane when:

- It is a T2 lane, and you have at least one passenger;
- It is a T3 lane, and you have at least two passengers.

Transit Lanes

Transit Lane Options

Transit Lanes are designed to encouraging carpooling - where people take it in turns to take several people on regular journeys, say into work. So give it a thought.

And don't bother trying to place 'dummies' or other fake humans in your car - police are aware of these tricks.

Transit Lanes

Transit Lane Users

The only vehicles that can travel in Transit Lanes (apart from cars meeting the criteria) are buses, taxis, hire cars, motorcycles, bicycles and emergency vehicles, no matter how many people are in them.

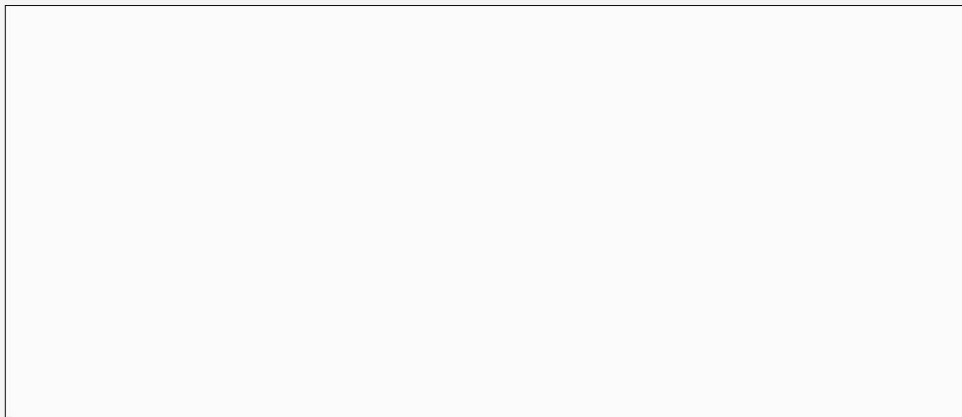

SUMMARY

In this lesson, Transit Lanes, we discussed:

- What transit lanes are.
- T2 and T3 transit lanes.
- Who can travel in transit lanes.
- Transit lanes ending.
